Q9	DIFFICULT	How should VAW Desk personnel address a victim-survivor's immediate needs and determine the appropriate next steps?	Personnel should provide a safe and private environment, address immediate needs, assess the victim-survivor's situation and risks, and determine the appropriate assistance, interview procedures, or referrals.	Step 1 Make sure that the victim-survivor is: • Comfortable; • In a safe and private room or area; and • Given water and other immediate needs such as food, first aid, and clothing. Step 2 Assess the situation by getting basic information that can determine present and possible risks. Step 3 If it is an emergency situation, do the following: • If further medical attention is needed, immediately take the victim- survivor to the nearest clinic or hospital; • If further legal attention or protective services are required, especially with regard to her security and safety, refer or take her to the appropriate offices which can better attend to her protection; and • Fill out the INTAKE FORM

Comparative Assessment of Chatbot Response Results

The results of the chunking configurations' implementation were evaluated by comparing the generated chatbot responses with the expected answer. This evaluation was done based on 12 questions prepared in advance with different levels of complexity, namely the questions about VAW desk operations and the provisions of Republic Act No. 9710.

The most relevant and informative responses for several questions were generated using the 800/80 chunking configuration. These questions included issues about the documentation process, protection of the victim-survivor's safety, and provision of immediate assistance. For example, its response to Q2 was relevant because it contained all necessary elements of documentation such as personal information, the purpose of visit, and actions to be taken. Also, a very informative answer to Q9 was generated, which included the discussion of victim-survivor's needs, risk assessment, and referrals. Still, there were some responses that were not accurate or

For the 500/50 configuration, short responses were provided for some questions, including the meaning of CEDAW in Q4 and how to refer to in Q6. However, incomplete answers were provided for others. The answer for question two had no other information other than the action that should be undertaken. Likewise, the answer for question seven was incomplete, providing an incomplete name of the international convention.

For the 1500/300 configuration, lengthy answers with much contextual information were provided. For example, for question nine, the answer included information on the type of assistance needed, risk assessment, need for medical attention, legal assistance, and documentations required. The answer for question eleven was also detailed in naming the bodies to report, the Philippine Commission on Women (PCW), the Commission on Human Rights (CHR), and what was needed in the reporting. However, for some questions, the answers provided were incomplete in addressing the questions. The answer for question two talked about the environment to

Meanwhile, the configuration 300/60 provided brief responses that included only parts of the necessary information. While answering question three, the configuration properly recognized the "Magna Carta of Women," it only gave the answer "CEDAW" to the question four without giving any explanation about what it meant. In some instances, there were also answers that included incomplete statements.

Generally speaking, the comparison reveals that both configurations have their own advantages and disadvantages. The configuration 1500/300 demonstrated high results in the process of retrieving information quantitatively. The configuration 800/80 was capable of providing relevant information in response to some procedural questions. The configuration 500/50 provided accurate answers to some selected questions, though sometimes they lacked necessary details. Finally, the configuration 300/60 demonstrated some weaknesses when providing the full answer. Thus, taking into account both retrieval criteria and qualitative analysis of responses, the selection of 800/80 as the final configuration is justified.

Q10	DIFFICULT	How should VAW Desk personnel handle a case that requires services from other institutions, and what resources can help identify appropriate referrals?	Personnel should determine the assistance required and refer the victim-survivor to appropriate institutions or agencies when the case requires services beyond the desk's scope. Referral directories and information about available legal, psychosocial, medical, and medico-legal services can help identify appropriate agencies.	The VAW Desk Officer should refer the victim-survivor to the appropriate institutions and agencies.
Q11	DIFFICULT	Which government entities are mandated to submit regular reports to Congress on the progress and implementation of this Act, and what must the second report specifically include?	incremental increase, police force, fifty percent, forty percent	NGAs and other government instrumentalities shall submit to the PCW their progress report on the implementation of the Act within January of every year.
